OLIVIER'S FINAL ESCAPE

London, March 28.—4 a. m.—Commandant Olivier appears to have gotten his 5,000 men and twenty-five miles of wagons into rugged country, where he can make an easy rear guard defense. Charles Williams, the military expert, says: "If this column gets through substantially Commandant Olivier will have carried out the great feat of the war, seeing that he ran every chance of being ground between the upper millstone of Lord Roberts' army and the nether millstone of the broken Basuto frontier."

He will have done it within fifty miles or so of Lord Roberts' main strength. Certainly it looked for a week as though Lord Roberts held Olivier in the hollow of his hand. If Olivier gets through to Kroonstadt with even 3,000 men, it will be an important addition to the Boer force gathering there. His escape is attributable in part to the worn out condition of the British cavalry horses. Lord Roberts' transport appears to have been badly dislocated by the loss at Retz river, before Cronje's surrender of the wagon train, and in addition to this the army, with which he proposes to advance toward Pretoria, is nearly double that of the earlier rapid movements.

Ten thousand transport, cavalry and gun animals, are due to arrive at Cape ports during this and next week.

It is given out at Cape Town that Lord Roberts' advance may be delayed for months. Although such statements should be received with reserve, it seems positive that he intends to go to Cape Town to meet Lady Roberts, who is due to arrive there in ten days.

The War Office has issued an other table of British losses, showing an aggregate of 16,652, which does include 4,001 who have been invalided home.
